Picture the possibilities.

These shirts let you combine messages to get your point across in one, two or three places.

What three-tier embroidery can do:

With your company logo on the chest and additional text on the collar and sleeve, your team makes a statement on three levels. Here are a few great reasons to apply three-tier embroidery:

Team Building

Add department names to the collar, and titles like "Team Captain" to the sleeve. Internal groups can better recognize one another and self-manage.

Company Awards

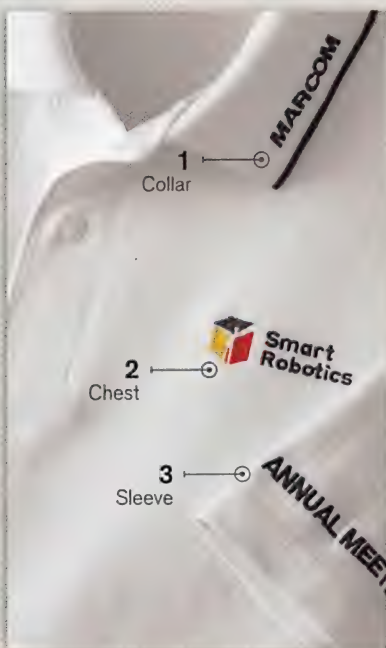

Reward employees for safety, innovation or service. Embroider the name of the award on the sleeve and the person's name on the collar.

Trade Shows

Cut through the chaos of trade shows. Identify sales reps, technical experts, instructors and executives with embroidered titles and names.

Community Events

Show the community your best side. Identify the event on the sleeve, place your logo on the chest, and reinforce your company name on the collar.

Dress your crew in smooth, dry comfort.

Cintas brings

How we beat the pants off the competition:

Retail-inspired styling makes our work pants look and fit just right. While others cut corners, we give our pants features you can see and feel:

- Each thigh has $\frac{3}{4}$ " more room than competing work pants, for a relaxed fit.
- Exclusive Cintas ComfortFLEX™ fabric stretches when you do—up to 11%—then regains its shape.
- The pockets are deep and secure, not shallow and flimsy.

270 IN KHAKI (62)

Angled pocket flaps won't curl; snaps keep your cargo secure.

Relaxed fit through the seat and thighs lets you move comfortably.

A brushed finish gives our fabric superior softness.

Cintas ComfortFLEX fabric resists wear and tear.

See pages 74-91 for our full selection of top-brand work shoes and boots for on-the-job protection.

SAFETY

Protect your people and protect your business. United States safety regulations require it.

Are you in compliance?

Safety standards guard employees who brave workplace hazards every day. Stay informed and stay safe.

OSHA The Occupational Safety & Health Administration (osha.gov) provides resources and helps employers prevent workplace injuries, accidents and illnesses.

ANSI The American National Standards Institute (ansi.org) establishes business best practices and cooperates in governmental efforts to ensure public safety and health.

NFPA Established in 1896, the National Fire Protection Association (nfpa.org) develops codes and standards that influence every industrial process and service in the United States.

You must ensure the safety of your staff by providing appropriate gear and apparel when their work involves:

Potential exposure to flame from any source

Visibility risks including work near motor traffic or heavy machinery, and work during nighttime hours or foul weather

Exposure to hazardous or corrosive chemicals such as acid and industrial by-products

Potential for arc flash from energized electrical parts or equipment, or work involving making and breaking electrical connections

Note that anyone who participates in hazardous work must be trained to do so, not only on the necessary skills but also on the hazards involved in the work.

ATPV HRC Ratings

HRC 2

Workers who deal with electricity need to be protected in the event that an arc flash occurs. Arc Thermal Performance Value (ATPV) represents the incident thermal energy the fabric can withstand before the wearer experiences a second-degree burn.

CAL/CM²

This calculation identifies the amount of heat energy that can be delivered at a particular distance from an arc flash. Once you know this value, you know the ATPV rating of the clothing required to protect against arc flash. For example, working on 600V switchgear with exposed, energized parts could typically present an arc flash hazard of up to 25 cal/cm² (that is, an ATPV rating of 25) and would necessitate a Category 3 Protective Clothing System.

HAZARD RISK CATEGORY (HRC)

HRC 1 protects against 4 cal/cm².

HRC 2 protects against 8 cal/cm².

HRC 3 protects against 25 cal/cm².

HRC 4 protects against 40 cal/cm².

FABRIC WEIGHT

The heavier the fabric, the more fibers there are per square yard. Fabric weight is typically measured in ounces per square yard or grams per square meter. Typically heavier fabric protects better, although the content of the fabric is key.

NEESC (National Electric Safety Code) C2-2007, Rule 410A3

This new update, which breaks down clothing system requirements by voltage, fault current and maximum clearing time, specifies three levels of required clothing: 4 cal/cm², 8 cal/cm² and 12 cal/cm². The new standard applies to utility companies, including power generation facilities. It requires a hazard assessment for employees who work on or near energized parts to determine the risk of exposure to electric arc. For secondary systems less than 1000V, the hazard assessment may be skipped if employees wear clothing that protects, at minimum, against 4 cal/cm². If the risk is greater than 2 cal/cm², employees are required to wear FR clothing with a rating at least equal to the level defined by the hazard assessment.

GUIDE TO SAFETY ICONS:

ANSI 107-2004 Conspicuity Ratings

The American National Standards Institute created safety guidelines for low-visibility work situations based on years of collaborative research with employers, workers, labs, safety professionals and government authorities. The ANSI guide sets the industry standard for the design, performance and use of high-visibility apparel. Garments that meet ANSI standards can be worn any time of day or night to give wearers a safe level of visibility, according to the appropriate class:

Class 1 is used in occupational activities which:

1. permit undivided attention to approaching traffic;
2. provide ample separation of the pedestrian worker from vehicle traffic;
3. involve warehouse equipment as a potential hazard;
4. involve roadside "right-of-way" or sidewalk maintenance; and
5. involve driving delivery vehicles.

Class 2 is used in occupational activities which:

1. require greater visibility due to inclement weather;
2. occur in visually complex backgrounds;
3. involve tasks which may divert attention from approaching vehicle traffic; and
4. take place in vehicle traffic or near vehicles moving at speeds in excess of 25 mph.

Class 3 is used in occupational activities which:

1. expose workers to vehicle traffic moving at speeds in excess of 50 mph;
2. involve high task loads that clearly place workers in danger; or
3. require the wearer to be conspicuous and identifiable as a person at a distance of 1,280 feet (390 meters).

All products:

3M Scotchlite™
Reflective Material

3M™ Scotchlite™ Reflective Material increases peace of mind. People who wear high-visibility safety garments know that they can be seen clearly at dawn, dusk or night, in any weather, even in challenging conditions. Staying safe on the job site requires discipline and awareness, and the right clothes enhance safety.

With a clear understanding of ANSI 107-2004 requirements, 3M engineers garments for road construction, law enforcement, utilities, firefighting, marine applications and many other types of work.
